Students from the University of Texas at Austin speak about the 2024 election and the issues that matter most to them. With many UT students experiencing their first election, I went around campus and asked what issues were most important. Student-voters had the opportunity to express their thoughts.

"I think the thing that has caught most people's attention this election is the money and how the economy is going to be over the next few years, especially in our generation," said Caroline Anderson, a sophomore biology major from San Angelo, Texas.

Interviews feature:
Speech, language and hearing science senior Arlin Loren from Cedar Hill, Texas.

Computer science junior Justin Wong from Roslyn Heights, New York.

Biology sophomore Caroline Anderson from San Angelo, Texas.

#jour317ut #J317Bell
Ig handle @mayahmorrisonpr

Link to official post
https://www.instagram.com/p/DCDt-_LOlvF/?utm_source=ig_web_copy_link&igsh=MzRlODBiNWFlZA==